

The Government Procurement Law Program presents

What Happens If the U.S. Withdraws from the WTO Government Procurement Agreement?

According to press reports, the Trump administration is mulling an executive order that would trigger U.S. withdrawal from the WTO Agreement on Government Procurement (GPA). This free colloquium, featuring leading experts Jean Heilman Grier (former lead US negotiator on procurement, USTR) and Robert Anderson (former senior counselor at the WTO), will assess the United States' potential withdrawal from the GPA, which would deprive U.S. suppliers of a key point of access to public procurement markets internationally — although the GPA, experts note, has set global standards and opened an estimated $1.7 trillion dollars annually in business opportunities. The session is open, and refreshments will be served.
